Description

New work and beautiful oil on panel by Fernand Maillaud (1863-1948), a major figure in the École de Crozant. This impressionist work depicts a charming stone bridge spanning the river around Crozant, in the heart of a hilly landscape typical of this region so dear to the painters. The composition seduces with a luminous, vibrant palette: the deep, nuanced blues of the water dialogue with the warm tones of the banks, blending ochres, pinks and greens. The generous, sweeping brushstrokes finely capture the play of light and the peaceful atmosphere of the countryside. All of Maillaud's sensibility is expressed here in this poetic vision of nature, where matter and color convey a vivid, spontaneous impression. Signed lower right. Dimensions: 33 x 41 cm (on view) and 40 x
