Description

Remarkable Neo-Baroque floral lamp in hammered and patinated wrought iron, produced in Holland in the first half of the 20th century (circa 1930-1940). This piece of artistic ironwork demonstrates rare technical mastery, combining two distinct crafts: a central shaft of hand-forged iron and decorative elements of cast iron executed with great finesse. The richly detailed design features an upward-growing floral arrangement centered on acanthus leaves and naturalistic flowers--daisies and anemones--whose striated centers reveal the meticulous attention to detail characteristic of custom workshops. The trapeze fabric lampshade rests on its original iron mount. The damaged period parchment has been replaced by a copper/amber-colored fabric in keeping with Dutch interiors of the period.
