Description

This refined sculpture depicts a young woman adorned with abundant curly hair embellished with roses, evoking the sensual, poetic imagery typical of Bacchic figures. The slight inclination of the head and the serene expression convey a gentle interiority, while the finesse of the modeling reflects the academic tradition of late 19th-century French sculpture. The composition is distinguished by its harmonious balance and naturalistic treatment of form. The partially draped bust, combined with the floral motif, underscores the subtle interplay between modesty and sensuality, a theme characteristic of the decorative arts of the Belle Époque. The bronze has a rich, nuanced patina, highlighting the delicate variations of light on the surface and underscoring the sculptor's attention to detail,
