Description

Pair of portraits of aristocrats from the reign of Louis XV. Male portrait: The model is depicted in bust form, wearing a red suit characteristic of the aristocracy or haute bourgeoisie. He wears a powdered wig and a lace ruffled shirt. His confident posture and direct gaze reflect his assertive social status. Female portrait: The woman is shown seated, wearing a refined dress in soft tones, adorned with lace and a bow on the bodice. She is holding a flower, a frequent symbol of femininity and delicacy. Her headdress and attitude testify to the codes of elegance under the reign of Louis XV. Oil on canvas in perfect condition, antique lining, 19th century frame.
