Description

and two hundred other decorative glass elements to bring light and personality to your restoration. Here are two superb 19th-century antique glass doors with the particularity of being curved and with opaque glass, only the peripheral bevels of the glass are clear. They are in very good condition, stripped, with all the original glass present and no splinters. This curved format and type of glass make them highly original decorative elements, and the light is both discreetly distributed between the opaque and clear parts. These two identical doors would therefore be perfect for a context where light is important, but not overly so For example, framing a bathtub in a bathroom (see the two last photos). Dimensions height 235 cm width 82 cm. Price EUR 3500 the pair. Opaque glasses
