Description

A sacred sculpture depicting the Virgin, crafted from carved, gilded, and polychrome wood, dating to the 17th century and attributed to Sicilian art.The work features a slender, harmonious figure, characterized by a soft, collected expression, with the face turned slightly upward, in a typical devotional setting.The rich, flowing drapery highlights the quality of the carving, while the gilding and polychrome, still clearly visible, give the sculpture a notable decorative presence.A typical Sicilian work of the 17th century, the sculpture fits into the devotional tradition, originally intended for religious settings or private collections.
