Description

La Rochelle earthenware plate XVIIIe - bird, dragonfly and flowering branch decor
La Rochelle earthenware plate, dating from the XVIIIe century, decorated with a charming naturalist motif. The decoration depicts a bird resting on a flowering branch overlooking a body of water, enlivened by the delicate presence of a dragonfly. The whole is treated in a characteristic palette blending brown, black, green, blue and golden yellow, conferring freshness and vivacity to the piece. La Rochelle earthenware, produced from the beginning of the XVIIIe century, enjoyed great success thanks to their simple, spontaneous and colorful decors inspired by nature and everyday life. They reflect the lively, prosperous atmosphere of this major port on the Atlantic seaboard. Made both for the local market and for
