Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Solid wood

Description

Black Forest stag sculpture - 19th century
A magnificent hand-carved limewood sculpture of a stag in a forest landscape. Finely detailed, it features a warm patina and rests on an oval base. Made from carved basswood, a wood traditionally used for carving in the Black Forest because of its fine texture and ability to reproduce details with precision. Epoque: Late 19th century (circa 1880-1900) Condition: Good condition, with traces of wear normal for its age. An ornament was originally attached to the top; it is now missing. A charming decorative piece and a classic example of traditional Black Forest craftsmanship.
