Description

Mahogany and marble console / side table - Empire period, 19th century
Elegant mahogany console or small side table, topped with a rectangular gray marble top. It rests on two detached cylindrical columns, adorned with finely chased ormolu rings, typical of the Empire style. The structure is reinforced by a low brace forming a shelf, providing both stability and functionality. The wood features a beautiful warm veining, contrasting harmoniously with the sobriety of the marble and the brilliance of the bronzes. A model that is both sober and architectural, ideal as a console or small display table.
