Description

Provenance

Omega wristwatch from the Speedmaster Classic Heritage line, produced in the late 1990s.

Founded in 1848, Omega is one of the leading Swiss watch manufacturers, known for the reliability of its automatic movements and its balanced approach to design, combining tradition with contemporary refinement.

Description

This model is characterized by a restrained and harmonious aesthetic, typical of late 20th-century dress watches. The silver-toned dial, with a subtle satin finish, features an alternation of applied baton indexes and stylized Roman numerals, creating a clear and well-structured layout. The date aperture at three o'clock is discreetly integrated into the dial. Slender hands, in a simplified dauphine style, enhance the overall elegance of the piece. The round case, of moderate proportions, is fitted with gently curved lugs that ensure comfortable wear. The watch is completed by a brown leather strap with a signed Omega buckle and is presented in its original box.

Technique and materials

Case crafted in 18k gold with a polished finish highlighting the clean lines of the design. Swiss automatic movement, as indicated on the dial, providing dependable daily performance. Domed crystal protecting the dial, consistent with the production standards of the period. Natural leather strap fitted with a gold-tone Omega-signed pin buckle.

Dating

Late 1990s, based on the stylistic combination of applied markers and Roman numerals, the presence of a modern automatic movement, and the reference number 36012000 corresponding to Omega production of that era.

Condition

Very good overall condition, both visually and mechanically. The case retains a pleasing surface with minor signs of wear. The dial remains clean and legible. The movement is in proper working order. The leather strap shows light, age-appropriate patina without significant damage.

Function and display

An elegant dress watch suitable for everyday wear as well as formal occasions. It integrates well into both modern and classic watch collections and serves as a refined, understated timepiece.
