

Le Petit Chaudron De Monsieur Le Marquis...

Description

Very fine domestic copper, probably used in a château kitchen, decorated with the owner's coat of arms. This cauldron is made of several sheets of copper assembled in a "wolf's tooth" pattern and brazed to brass. Circular in shape with a slightly globular base, it rests on three truncated cone-shaped feet soldered with tin (one shows traces of restoration). One of them is fitted with a wrought-iron swinging handle attached to two beautifully folded copper leaves riveted to the bowl. Two very fine repoussé decorations on the bowl, one of which depicts in a coat of arms the house coat of arms under a marquisal crown, two lions on a burin-stamped background; the other depicts a leafy cartouche in the Louis XIV style.
