Description

An elegant console table in the neoclassical style, inspired by the Louis XVI style with Empire influences, characterized by clean lines and harmonious proportions. The frame features turned and fluted legs, joined by a linear band embellished with decorative gold-leaf appliqués featuring plant motifs and scrolls. The light lacquer finish, accompanied by decorative gilding, has been restored over time, giving the piece a pleasing and decorative appearance, while still revealing traces of later interventions. The dark-colored top, with warm, yellowish grain, appears to be of an older construction than the frame and lends the piece an interesting textural contrast. The piece appears to be the result of an assembly or reworking using elements from an earlier period, subsequently refinished and
