Description

"Snowfall on the Roofs of Milan," Oil on canvas, 20th century (50 × 60 cm; framed 69 × 79 cm) A striking winter cityscape, imbued with a delicate, muffled atmosphere, in which the city lies beneath a soft blanket of snow. The composition unfolds through a succession of rooftops and architectural forms rendered with thick, textured brushstrokes that capture the cold light of the snow-covered landscape. In the background, barely visible and almost dissolved in the mist, the outline of Milan Cathedral emerges, lending a sense of depth and perspective. Notes Signed lower right, as shown in the photographic documentation.
