Description

Remarkable, imposing gilded wood sculpture of a flying putti with generous, expressive forms, typical of 18th-century Baroque and Rococo production. The angel, with outstretched wings and animated drapery, displays the typical craftsmanship of the period in its rendering of volumes and anatomical details. The gold leaf gilding on red Armenian bowl, partially patinated by time, lends the whole the quality of a piece as rare as it is decorative. This type of decorative element originally adorned church altarpieces and aristocratic interior decor. Good condition - wear and missing gilding from use, old patina
