Description

This charming little watercolor depicts the entrance to the grounds of a chateau, a young woman, perhaps the chatelaine, addressing a man resting seated on a pile of stones. Framed since the early 19th century in a pretty gold-leafed baguette in good condition and a nice patina and assembled with clavettes still as in the XVIII^e. Watercolors are insolated, so it's best to use a glass rod for a more precious drawing. You can also enjoy the set this way, as it has a certain charm. Dimensions of the rabbet: 21.5 cm x 31 cm
