Description

Remarkable cast-iron sculpture depicting a young boy standing on a molded circular base, brandishing with his raised hand a large rayed sun adorned with a smiling face in relief, whose central disk, molded in old resin (galalith or similar) conceals a candle-holder. This decorative piece of character, typical of ornamental production in the second half of the 19th century, testifies to the period's taste for allegorical figures and cast-iron garden decorations. The antique gray patina lends a beautiful presence to this rare piece of great poetic and decorative effect. Good condition, beautiful antique patina, weakened sunburst and loose standard foot. DIMENSIONS: H.179cm / W.52cm / D.40cm. Iron casting, garden sculpture, boy in the sun, Napoleon III, 19th century decor, allegorical
