Description

18th century French school - Academy drawing of a man This drawing represents an academic study of a male nude, seated on a rock, right arm raised. This academy elegantly illustrates the rigor and movement of French drawing in the 18th century. Thanks to its mastery of drawing and anatomical precision, it represents an excellent model for studio studies. In the 18th century, the study of the nude was at the heart of artistic training. Drawing academies, particularly in Paris, imposed rigorous exercises based on live models. Dimensions unframed: L:54.6cm l:33.5cm Dimensions framed: L:71.5cm l:50.5cm
