Description

An ancient sculpture made entirely of terracotta, depicting an elderly man in a half-length portrait, dressed in an ancient-style tunic. The expression of the figure, as well as the deep folds of the tunic, are skillfully rendered by the artist's hand, which leaves nothing to idealistic interpretations and faithfully conveys the visual reality of a person in the twilight of his years, his face etched by the inexorable passage of time. The drapery possesses a strong sculptural quality, as evidenced by the pronounced chiaroscuro visible in raking light. The bust of the elderly man rests at the base on a circular pedestal, lending the composition a measured sense of balance.
