Description

First-edition chandelier by designer Werner Schouby Danish publisher Coronell Electro in 1969Sculptural, Brutalist-style suspension made up of horizontal brass ribbon strips is also distinguished by its lacquered sheet metal structure featuring faux-wood decor.An essential feature guaranteeing the authenticity of a first edition, the interior of the slats is painted entirely white to act as a reflector and optimize light diffusion.This technical detail underlines the care taken in period manufacture compared to later reissues.Werner Schou having mastered the art of concealing the light source behind an interweaving of metal, this model was designed to diffuse a non-glaring, almost mystical ambient light. The visual effect produced is typical of Danish design from this period combining
