Description

An elegant Italian-designed chest of drawers/sideboard from the 1970s, attributed to Willy Rizzo, characterized by the clean, rigorous lines typical of the modernist style of the era. The structure is made of wood with a dark finish, enhanced by metal details that emphasize its geometric profile and create a refined textural contrast. The piece features a functional and well-balanced composition, with spacious and practical drawers designed for daily use yet making a strong aesthetic statement. The smooth surfaces and metallic elements evoke Rizzo's stylistic language, known for the use of glossy finishes and chrome accents that enhance the essential forms. Signed, it represents a significant example of 1970s Italian design, where elegance, functionality, and sophisticated taste blend into a
