Description

Holding this generously proportioned Tripod coffee pot in your hand is like stepping into François-Boucher's famous painting "Le déjeuner", where in a comfortable, fashionable interior a young man grabs an identical model sitting on the mantelpiece to pour for the family gathered around a small table.It's a bit of the gentle art de vivre of the mid-seventeenth century that comes to us intact with this plump coffee pot, in lined metal, with a very pretty ebony handle. The silver plating is in perfect condition, perhaps redone some time ago but already with a beautiful skin and of fine quality. A nice size, it conveniently serves a good number of guests.
