Description

This pair of Saint-Louis Cleo crystal decanters represents a high-end production from the crystalworks, established around 1903. The Cleo design is recognizable by its engraved Louis XV-style arabesques, refined facets, and hand-blown and then hand-engraved construction. The Cleo model was manufactured for over a century, until the 2010s. Based on the shape and quality of the crystal, these are likely: either liqueur decanters, or wine coolers or tableware. The so-called "burette" shape with a long, elongated neck, the handles applied in a swan-neck style, the stoppers are original and cut in an elongated teardrop shape, no chips on the neck or stopper, the decoration is acid-etched and wheel-engraved with floral scrolls, short stem on a small circular foot, hand-blown construction,
