Description

Georges Omerth Infirmière soignant un soldat sculpture Art Déco en Bronze début XXe Active during the years 1895 to 1925, Georges Omerth was a talented yet enigmatic French bronze sculptor, very little is known about his lifetime. The intimacy of his life did not prevent him from making a career, mainly on the theme of militaria, during the Art Deco period (1910-1939), sought after today. This Bronze group signed on the terrace represents a nurse from the Great War of 1914-1918, holding a bottle of alcohol, the "war remedy" used to sober the wounded soldier on the ground. Badly wounded, bandaged, his helmet and weapon on the ground, he is leaning against a ruin. Omerth exposes the reality of conditions in this dark period of European history, posing as a true critic,
