Description

Elegant Rosewood and Rosewood marquetry display case, this Louis XVI-style piece dating from the late 19th century seduces with its refinement and the quality of its cabinetwork. Its pedestal top gives it a slender silhouette, while the upper part opens onto a glass door fitted with an elaborate bronze key and a perfectly functional lock, allowing the display of precious objects or collections. In the center, a drawer adorned with two bronze drawer rings forming laurel wreaths adds a noble, typically neoclassical decorative touch. The lower section, featuring two doors with chiselled knobs, opens onto a practical storage space. The whole piece rests on slender tapered legs, and the uprights are enriched at the top with beautiful bronze falls, testifying to the attention to detail and high-end character of this
