Description

Beautiful nude male figure, depicted in a relaxed, slightly curled pose, highlighting a powerfully modeled torso. One leg is extended while the other is bent, creating a dynamic composition despite the resting attitude.This figure evokes classical representations of hercules, titans or river allegories, with a robust body and developed musculature, suggesting mature strength rather than idealized youth. The treatment of modelling and freedom of form strongly recall Auguste Rodin's aesthetic: the body is sensually magnified, in an expressive rather than strictly academic approach..Beautiful, nuanced brown-green patina, animating the surface and emphasizing the reliefs.Antique edition cast. Unsigned, no founder's mark. Lost-wax casting, probably early 20th century.
