Description

This expansive modernist architectural desk belongs to the famous "Executive Office Group" (EOG) series. The structural design relies on a large rectangular top (167 cm) in carefully selected walnut veneer. It is supported by two asymmetrical suspended pedestals, featuring two and three drawers respectively. The entire assembly rests on a tubular chromed steel base, equipped with adjustable glides at the bottom to ensure optimal stability. The facades are punctuated by profiled extruded aluminum pulls. This piece features a highly sought-after attribute: its walnut back panel (modesty panel) that encloses the rear space between the pedestals. The original Herman Miller label is preserved under the top, near the central niche.Designed in 1949 and produced until 1977, this model is the masterful work of American architect George Nelson (1908-1986). Appointed Director of Design for the legendary Herman Miller firm from 1947 to 1972, Nelson radically redefined 20th-century office furniture. The EOG series embodies his vision of a workspace that is authoritative, rational, and stripped of visual heaviness, marking the golden age of the American Mid-Century Modern movement.Condition report: Good overall vintage condition. The walnut veneer displays a patina of use with signs of time inherent to its working function (superficial scratches on the top, pedestals, and drawer fronts). Regarding the hardware: the lock on one pedestal is present (key missing), the second lock is absent. This iconic desk will masterfully anchor a contemporary executive space, combining functional comfort with historical prestige.Click Here to see this piece directly on Our Website
