Description

A charming piece of 19th-century French rustic furniture in solid oak, ideal as a small side table or bedside table. This piece embodies the simplicity and authenticity of French country furniture, where functionality and simplicity of materials were central to the design. It features a drawer with its original hardware and an open lower compartment, offering both storage and display possibilities. The oak has acquired a warm, natural patina over time, with subtle wear emphasizing its wabi-sabi character. The turned legs and simple joints testify to the craftsmanship typical of 19th-century provincial know-how. Compact in size but full of presence, this piece of furniture finds its perfect place beside a bed, in an entryway or as a decorative element in a living room. Its rustic charm and timeless materials
