Description

An elegant small Venetian chest of drawers from the Vicenza area, dating to the late 19th century, belonging to the style traditionally known as "Recoarese"--a term derived from Recoaro Terme, a famous Venetian spa town that was highly renowned between the 19th and 20th centuries. These pieces were often crafted to furnish hotels and residences in the Recoaro spa area, distinguished by their simple, practical, and elegant lines, which still blend seamlessly today into both classic and contemporary settings. The piece features a slender structure supported by curved legs in the late 19th-century style. The front is divided into four drawers--two smaller upper ones and two larger lower ones--all embellished with a beautiful walnut veneer arranged in a mirror-image grain pattern. Entirely veneered in walnut, it retains a lovely warm and luminous patina. Inside, the drawers are lined with antique decorative paper. The piece was restored a few years ago and is in good overall condition. There are normal signs of age and use, particularly some light wear and small marks on the top, likely caused by vases or decorative objects placed on it over time.
