Description

This exceptional marble sculpture, signed by the renowned artist Aristide De Ranieri (1865-1954), is a true invitation to contemplation and poetry. It depicts a young woman with braids, dressed and draped with timeless elegance, thinning out the leaves of a daisy. This simple yet symbolically charged gesture recalls the famous nursery rhyme "Je t'aime un peu, beaucoup, passionnément, à la folie, pas du tout". Each petal seems to carry an element of mystery, tenderness and nostalgia, as if the artist had frozen a moment of grace and reflection. A petal is missing, which adds a touch of melancholy and authenticity to this work. However, this in no way detracts from its beauty or charm. On the contrary, this imperfection makes the sculpture even more human and touching. In good overall condition, this piece bears witness to the quality of the marble used and the talent of its creator. The smooth, luminous marble highlights the smallest details: the folds of the garment, the carefully sculpted braids, and the delicate hands of the young woman. These elements give the work an almost living presence, as if it could, at any moment, come alive before our eyes. With a height of 59 cm, this sculpture combines elegance, refinement and emotion. It is a timeless tribute to feminine beauty, to the poetry of small everyday gestures, and to the universality of feelings of love. This work will fit perfectly into a classic art collection or as the centerpiece of a sophisticated interior. It will capture the attention of all lovers of art and beauty, while bringing a touch of romance and grace to your space. Don't miss the opportunity to add this rare and timeless sculpture to your collection. A must-see work of art that will move and inspire you with every glance.
