Description

Here's a solid marble column of rare elegance, carved in gray-veined white marble, that will bring a touch of sophistication to your interior. Its finely carved vertical flutes emphasize the height and purity of its lines, creating a captivating play of light and shadow. The 35 cm square base provides a stable, harmonious foundation. Just above, a rounded, beaded molding encircles the column, adding a touch of elegance and refinement to its design. This molding, visible in the photos, lends character to the piece and recalls the attention to detail paid by craftsmen of the period. The flutes, arranged in the direction of the height, lead the eye to the sober, elegant capital, which ends in a round platform measuring 26 cm in diameter. This smooth, well-finished platform provides an ideal surface on which to place a decorative object or sculpture. With a total height of 110 cm, this 1940s-1950s column is a true masterpiece of craftsmanship. A few micro-scratches on the base are present, but they are barely visible and in no way affect the beauty or solidity of the piece. On the contrary, they add a touch of authenticity and charm, recalling its history and venerable age. This column is much more than just a decorative object: it's a piece of character, sure to sublimate your space. Whether in a living room, hallway or even an office, it will bring an artistic and timeless dimension to your interior. Its classic style and understated elegance make it a perfect choice for lovers of antiques and unique pieces. MORE PHOTOS AND INFORMATION BY FOLLOWING THIS LINK:
