450 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Porcelain

Description

Important porcelain sculpture from Dehua (Fujian Province), characterized by its unctuous glaze of pure, brilliant white. The piece depicts Budai, the Buddhist monk with a rounded belly, the embodiment of benevolence and prosperity. Face and Expression : The modeling shows a jovial face with finely detailed features, eyes crinkled with laughter and ears with elongated lobes, symbols of wisdom. Attributes : He wears around his neck an imposing rosary (mala) whose grains are precisely carved in relief. He is dressed in a loose monastic robe revealing his chest and abdomen. The folds of the robe are treated with characteristic fluidity, embracing the shape of the right leg. Material : The fineness of the grain and the translucency of the porcelain suggest quality workmanship, typical of the Dehua kiln
