Description

Tapisserei Atelier de ma marche Tapestry from the story of David illustrating the exchange between King David and Uriah the Hittite, an officer in his army. David summons him and gives him a letter intended for Joab, the army commander, containing the order to place Uriah in the front line of battle. The scene in the background evokes the officer's tragic end on the battlefield, caused by the king's jealousy of Bathsheba, Uriah's wife. The exchange of letters between the king and his officer echoes that of David to Bathsheba. David will send to Bathsheba, telling her of his death. Fruit and flower border. Materials, condition and dimensions. This tapestry has preserved its beautiful colors and original border. Old restorations of poor execution that have not been touched but can be restored on estimate. The ensemble remains very harmonious with this magnificent polychromy.
