Description

Stepping into the quiet world of mid-19th-century Victorian romanticism, this European portrait offers a deeply poetic scene. A young girl has paused her journey across endless golden hills to rest on a wayside stone. With her shawl resting loosely on her shoulders, she watches us with a gentle, thoughtful weariness, carefully protecting a forget-me-not she gathered along the path. The painter creates a breathtaking sense of depth, letting the far distance melt into a silvery-blue mist under a radiant golden sky. Steeped in a quiet seclusion and melancholic peace, this captivating portrait brings a timeless sense of calm to any home or collection. DETAILS: Artist: Signed lower left. Presumably by the British artist Paul Falconer Poole RA (1807-1879). The reverse of the canvas bears the stamp of George
