Description

An icon of athleticism and nobility in your home
This stunning "Discobolo" table lamp is a standout piece in my collection for those who wish to combine decorative lighting with the timeless charm of classical sculpture. During the Grand Tour, European nobility loved to adorn their homes with refined reproductions of the works they admired in Italian museums; this late 19th-century bronze statuette is a sublime testament to that tradition. First and foremost, the work depicts the athlete--a symbol of strength and dynamism--cast with such mastery that it highlights the muscular tension and formal perfection of the figure. Period details and Italian craftsmanship Made in Italy in the late 19th century, the sculpture rests on a solid wooden base specially designed for use as a lamp. The bronze body, measuring 40x20 cm with a height of 30 cm, is complemented by an elegant lampshade made of gathered fabric that lends the piece an aura of warmth and prestige. In fact, the combination of burnished metal and fine fabric creates a striking aesthetic contrast.

Consequently, this object is not merely a source of light but a decorative element capable of transforming an office or living room into a space of high prestige.
