Description

Ladies and Gentlemen in an Aristocratic Garden - Eugenio Bonivento
Oil on canvas, signed lower left Dimensions: 105 × 75 cm (87 × 60 cm canvas only) An elegant 18th-century-style scene set in a refined monumental garden, brought to life by figures in period dress immersed in a social and luminous atmosphere. The painting depicts a moment of conversation and strolling among ladies and gentlemen, arranged along a perspective avenue leading toward staircases, statues, and greenery, evoking the grand aristocratic parks of the 18th century. The brushwork is fluid and the colors delicate yet luminous. The work combines decorative elegance and chromatic delicacy, making it ideal for both classical settings and more modern contexts where one wishes to introduce a cultured and refined accent. Biographical notes on the artist Eugenio Bonivento was born in Chioggia in 1880 and trained as a student of Guglielmo Ciardi. He exhibited for the first time in 1908 at the Galleria Bevilacqua La Masa in Venice, a key hub for young artists of the time, and soon followed this with major exhibitions in Turin and Milan. While drawing from the Venetian tradition, he developed a personal style characterized by rapid, concise brushwork and a keen sensitivity to color. To meet market demand, he also produced works in the 18th-century style, sometimes signed with the pseudonym E. Zeno, and watercolors of Venetian views that were highly prized by foreign collectors. His move to Milan, shortly before World War II, marked a decisive phase in his career, leading him to full artistic maturity and wider recognition.
