Description

Portable Tibetan round-shaped, hammered and decorated silver, housing in the center a green Tara image protected by a glass pane. Kept in its textile case with carrying strap, the ghau (or gau) was carried on one's person or taken on journeys as a talisman of devotion and protection. It might contain a sacred image, mantra or relic; here, green Tara symbolizes protection, active compassion and help in the face of obstacles. Tibet, early 20th century. Good condition.
