Description

The marli of each plate is embellished with six garlands of flowers contained in reserves and separated by two rows of carmine dotted lines containing a blue "comb" motif. The basin of each earthenware piece features a beautiful decoration inspired by paintings by David Teniers Lejeune (- 1695). The first painting depicts three figures seen from behind against a lacustrine background. The second table features two seated men playing cards and a woman serving them a drink, also against a lake background. Our two plates were made in the late 19th, early 20th century. The whites come from the Langeais factory and were sold to Parisian CHambrelans (decorators) who created the decor for foreign clients.
