Description

Superb Kuba rug from Azerbaijan in the Caucasus. Its decorative vocabulary is typical of late 19th-century production, as is the palette of hues that make it up. On the central field, 2 large central medallions stand out. In the Caucasian tradition, they represent the sacred organization of space, the home or the clan. Each medallion features 5 rosettes arranged in a cross, complemented by other stylized floral motifs. The medallions are encircled by stepped, crenellated motifs whose function is to protect the family. Also on the field, 3 distinct bands of 4 Caucasian Guls evoke family, descent and transmission. Around the field is a magnificent, uninterrupted border of tangled hook motifs symbolizing protection. This is an impenetrable protective barrier that shelters all family
