Description

Rare and moving daguerreotype depicting a young child seated in a studio armchair, holding a small hat in her lap. The portrait is presented in its original antique frame with gilded matting under glass. The work is distinguished by its fine execution as well as its delicate period color highlights visible on the costume and face. The image displays the typical characteristics of the daguerreotype: silvery surface with reflections that change depending on the angle of view and remarkable precision of detail. The child's outfit, particularly the pagoda sleeves and the silhouette of the dress, allows a dating to around 1855-1856, at the beginning of the Second Empire. Frame dimensions: Height: 22 cm Width: 19.5 cm Good overall condition.
