Description

Meissen white porcelain Panther sculpture, signed Erich Oehme on a naturalistic base. Blue crossed swords mark, numbered 78733 also as the Weiss crossed swords mark. The idea for the "Panther" by Erich Oehme, one of the most important sculptors of the 20th century, is said to have come to him around 1920 while observing a cat lying down. The sculpture emphasizes strength, dynamism and willpower: this panther is an impressive muscular force, ready to pounce at any moment, dangerous and unpredictable, yet possessing bewitching beauty and elegance. In perfect condition, listed in the Meissen - Bergmann catalogue
