Description

This mid-20th-century Scandinavian landscape (1958), attributed to the Swedish artist B. Skarp (Birger Skarp, 1930-1972), is a magnificent example of Swedish modernism. The canvas depicts a monumental arch bridge over the Ljungan river in the Medelpad province, immersed in summer greenery. The artist uses an expressive style, focusing on structure and the simplification of forms. The work is built on the bold use of colour and expressive brushstrokes, creating a deep sense of space without excessive detailing. Permeated with the atmosphere of northern nature, the painting simultaneously demonstrates the harmony of landscape architecture and the environment, and will become an intellectual aesthetic accent for any collection or interior.
