Description

Beautiful oil on canvas depicting a street in old Rouen bustling with people, dominated in the background by the majestic silhouette of the cathedral emerging in a slightly misty atmosphere. The painter sensitively captures the soft, damp light typical of Norman urban landscapes. The composition, built in depth, naturally leads the eye to the cathedral, whose volumes melt into a palette of bluish grays and delicately nuanced tones. The lively, spontaneous brushstrokes, combined with a light, luminous material, evoke the spirit of the painters of the Rouen School and early 20th-century French post-impressionism. The discreet animation of the passers-by and the details of the old facades give this scene an authentic, timeless charm. Very beautiful decorative painting, both poetic and
