Description

"Accustomed to photographing men of power, Gérard Rancinan has chosen here to look at the anonymous crowds that populate major capitals. New York, Paris, London, Berlin, Tokyo: five megacities, five mixed cities where man must constantly coexist, isolate, mingle and protect himself. An urban jungle where extreme sophistication meets the primitive. The nudity of the models was obvious, as was their multitude. Whether student, waiter, butcher, mechanic, antique dealer or policeman, they expose their mixed, tattooed, wounded flesh, their infinitely different bodies. Urban Jungle is at once a reportage, an ethnological survey and a great aesthetic fresco. Because beyond the bodies, it's the souls that hover from page to page... Urban Jungle or the first port of call in Gérard
