Description

A striking and dramatic Baroque composition attributed to Giuseppe Volò, known as Giuseppe Vicenzino (Milan, 1662 - after 1700), one of the most refined masters of Lombard floral still life painting between the 17th and 18th centuries. The work depicts a lavish garland of colorful flowers that unfolds dramatically around two central cherubs, captured in a delicate child's game beneath a softly draped cloth. Set against a dark background with intense luminosity, the composition fully reveals the artist's Baroque figurative style: the flowers--tulips, roses, lilies, and other botanical elements--are painted with extraordinary chromatic vibrancy and meticulous attention to naturalistic detail. The cherubs, rendered with soft chiaroscuro and pearlescent tones, introduce an allegorical and poetic dimension that enriches the work's decorative framework. The balance between the floral richness and the delicate presence of the figures creates a composition of great elegance and scenic depth, typical of the finest Lombard art of the late 17th century. The sumptuous gilded frame further enhances the painting, accentuating its monumental character and collector's refinement. A work of great charm and pictorial quality, ideal for important collections of antique paintings, historic residences, or prestigious settings.
