Original steel engraving with burin. Hand watercolored. Beautiful antique map depicting the Morbihan department, published in 1791, shortly after the creation of the French departments during the Revolution in 1789. This engraving, colored at the time, accurately depicts Brittany's southern coastline, as well as the department's main towns, ports, rivers and administrative divisions. It particularly highlights the jagged coastline of the Gulf of Morbihan, treated with an important blue and yellow highlighting of the coasts, islands and peninsulas. These include Vannes, Auray, Hennebont, Pontivy, Josselin, Rochefort-en-Terre, La Roche-Bernard and Port-Louis. The islands of Belle-Île, Houat, Hoedic and Groix also appear with a watercolor
