Description

Antique Crystal Chandelier with Amber Drops, 10 Lights, 1950 features a circular brass cage-like structure adorned with an interlaced pattern--a network of hand-strung clear crystal beads that connects the ten spindles of this mid-20th-century antique chandelier. In addition to this intricate handcrafted crystal decoration, each burnished brass stem is adorned with floral elements--six-petaled flowers crafted from hand-strung transparent and amber crystal beads. At the top and bottom, the ten arms of this Italian chandelier dating from the mid-20th century are connected by small crowns made of perforated brass sheet. Characteristic of this chandelier are the ten curved arms, each flanked by a double row of transparent crystal beads--also handcrafted--and floral decorations. The upper and lower sections of this ten-light chandelier, as well as the small tree enclosed at the center of the structure, are all embellished with long teardrop pendants in clear and amber crystal that reflect light with a sophisticated and warm glow. The chandelier has been completely rewired to European standards; the ten bulbs have E14 mini sockets, and the chandelier is wired to ensure safety and functionality for a maximum power of 750 watts. The measurements refer only to the chandelier's structure; the height can be increased with a chain and a ceiling cup, to be specified upon request. The original design of this classic handcrafted Italian crystal chandelier with amber accents makes it perfect for mid-century style interiors, dining rooms, or elegant and prestigious entryways; it can be styled with both contemporary and antique furnishings. It has been completely restored by our workshop and is now fully functional and in perfect condition. The listed price does not include shipping in a wooden crate.
