in mixed media, primarily oil on canvas, with evident painterly interventions and a textured surface of remarkable visual quality. The presence of the canvas, the chromatic glazes, and the manual techniques lend the work great depth and dramatic presence. Leonardo Cremonini, one of the leading figures in Italian painting of the late 20th century, participated in the 1964 Venice Biennale and the 1965 Rome Quadriennale, also exhibiting in New York and major European cities. His works are now part of important international public and private collections. A work of great charm and strong aesthetic impact, ideal for collectors of 20th-century Italian art and for prestigious settings.
