Description

Sublimate your bedroom or living room with this exceptionally rare pair of "Desirée" bedside tables, designed by renowned Italian architect and artist Luciano Frigerio in the 1970s. This exquisite duo epitomizes mid-twentieth-century Italian luxury and Brutalist glamour. Finding a complete, authentic set of these bedside tables in such pristine condition is an incredible opportunity for discerning collectors and high-end interior designers. Visionary of Italian design, Luciano Frigerio was famous for his conception of furniture as an art in its own right. At his famous "Frigerio di Desio" workshop in Brianza, he pioneered the concept of "sculptural furniture". Frigerio chose to steer clear of industrial mass production, favoring architectural forms combined with rich, tactile materials. This magnificent pair perfectly embodies his philosophy, making them highly sought-after items on the international mid-twentieth-century furniture market. The aesthetic impact of these nightstands lies in their masterful contrast of materials and textures. Each cabinet is beautifully wrapped in a deeply figured, dark-grained veneer that highlights the natural luxury of the timber. Stretching across the front of the single doors is a heavy, continuous brass relief panel. This hammered, highly textured Brutalist element captures and plays with ambient light, giving the set an undeniably dramatic character. The rich wood and sculptural brass are elegantly framed by a rounded matte black trim at the top and anchored by a monumental, heavy brass-plated plinth at the base. Designed with practical elegance in mind, the single doors open smoothly to reveal a meticulously finished interior divided by a central shelf, offering ample and sophisticated storage. The original "Frigerio di Desio" metal maker's tag is proudly displayed on the inside of the doors, guaranteeing their prestigious provenance and absolute authenticity. Whether utilized as glamorous bedside tables or placed as sophisticated end tables flanking a high-end sofa, their sculptural presence will immediately ground any space with vintage Italian sophistication. This rare set has remained in magnificent original vintage condition, showing only a few light marks of wear and minor signs of use, perfectly consistent with its five-decade history. These subtle marks in no way detract from its appearance, but rather testify to its authentic vintage journey. We invite you to browse the detailed photo gallery to fully appreciate the rich patina and incredible craftsmanship of this iconic Frigerio duo.
