Description

Angelo Abrate, "Returning from Monginevro," oil on panel, signed, 1925 Slightly illegible signature in the lower right corner; On the reverse, signature and title: "Returning from Monginevro in the quiet of sunset, between La Salle and Turin." January 1925 Angelo Abrate (1900-1985) is one of the most emblematic and authentic figures in 20th-century mountain painting, capable of blending a passion for extreme mountaineering and artistic expression into a single existential experience. Born in Turin but deeply connected to the massifs of Haute-Savoie, Abrate did not limit himself to portraying the peaks from the valley, but experienced the mountains as an open-air studio, carrying his canvas and easel above three thousand meters to capture the very essence of rock and
