Description

Regency period oak regional buffet - 18th century Important Régence-period solid oak regional buffet, opening with two molded doors on the front. The front features beautiful moving panels with soft, balanced lines, characteristic of early 18th-century provincial furniture. Slightly curved uprights and a cut-out base give the piece a beautiful elegance despite its massive structure. Very fine quality. Very fine craftsmanship and superb antique oak patina highlight the authentic character of the piece. The interior offers plenty of storage space. This sideboard has it all. This sideboard displays all the charm of French regional furniture from the Regency period, with a sober, architectural aesthetic typical of production in Eastern or Central-Eastern France.
